COMMENT OF THE DAY

Above all the present Communist Party chiefs have reason to fear an irresistible demand for a Polish act of Titovism. Competent observers of the political scene in Poland have recently laid emphasis on a developing line of thought among the masses that if the country must have a Communist form of government, let it at least be one of the Poles' own choice and unfettered by external direction, amounting to domination.

TO a certain degree this has found reflection recently in the Polish parliament, which has given signs that it intends, if possible, to become something more than a rubber-stamp of the Russian-controlled Communist regime. The Deputies have for some time been behaving in a surprisingly uninhibited way; strong and sarcastic criticisms have been made and debates have been officially described as heated. Thus the new parliamentary elections to be held next week assume an importance with which they have not previously been invested.

The outcome of the elections is not likely to be sensational; nevertheless the new electoral law that is now being drafted may permit, in due course, a situation where enough Deputies who are not Communists controlled, can win their way into parliament to at least influence the debates sufficiently to nullify the autocratic tyranny of the Party bureaucracy and of individual Party bosses.

Even without this development, there are several indications that the existing rulers must, in their own interests, take careful heed of the current manifestations of independent thought which is growing among the people, and to shape their domestic policies accordingly.

The Colonel was publicly supported in his action by the deputy chief of the army, Colonel Zulkifli Lubis. The minister was, however, exonerated.—Reuter.

The geese became angry when he planned, piloted by a local club member, Jean Vibert, to show them as it came out of a cloud and killed several. The geese then reformed their flight and attacked the aircraft which had to land to escape.—D.

Mr. Hilary Minc, Poland's first Vice-Premier, has asked to be relieved of his duties. Warsaw Radio reported tonight. He has also resigned from the Politburo of the Polish United Workers Communist Party. He gave ill-health as his reason, the radio said.—Reuter.

A patrol of the Royal Scots Fusiliers spotted the three terrorists while combing the commercial caves. Reinforcements were immediately brought in. Two-pounder guns of the 1st/12 Hussars kept up a harassing fire all last night. During breaks in the bombardment a loudspeaker was used to urge the three terrorists to surrender.

BRITAIN DETERMINED TO DO ITS DUTY OVER SUEZ

London, Oct. 9.

British Chancellor of the Exchequer, Harold Macmillan, today gave firm assurances that the British Government was determined to "do its duty" to obtain an equitable solution of the Suez problem.

Addressing bankers and business men at the annual Lord Mayor's banquet at the Mansion House here, Macmillan said: "Neither the military expenditure which we have incurred as a result of the Suez affair or the degree of disturbance to shipping have had a significant effect on our economy. Nevertheless, on the outcome of this affair, our life and that of all Western Europe may well depend."

End Not In View

"No British Government worthy of the name can shirk or evade these responsibilities. Her Majesty's present ministers are, I can assure you, determined to do their duty."

Macmillan admitted that the Suez crisis involved heavier budget expenditure, the end of which was not yet in view. There was, however, no reason to believe that this expenditure would radically alter the budget.

In the rest of his speech Macmillan discussed the Government's monetary policy, aimed, he said, at fighting inflation. He said he did not consider it was yet possible to soften this policy.

Macmillan on this issue made the following points:

★ 1. The present government's monetary policy had done much to limit expenditure, encourage saving and to make money scarce and expensive. It was still too early to discuss the success or failure of this policy.

★ 2. On the question of balance of payments Macmillan said that export figures for Britain had been higher than import figures during the first three months of this year. At the present rate exports were six per cent higher in volume and 10 per cent higher in value than last year. Invaluable exchanges were also in Britain's favour, he said.

Less Zeal

★ 3. Although the trade boom had waned since his budget speech last April, Macmillan said there was still no sign of unemployment. Plans for business re-equipment were being carried out, but there was less zeal for further plans. Retail prices were stable and had even dropped since August. —France-Press.

MME SOONG INVITED TO NEPAL

Paris, Oct. 9. Tanka Prasad Acharya today invited Madame Soong Ching-ling, Vice-Chairman of the Communist Chinese National People's Congress to visit his country, the New China News Agency reported.

At a banquet given by Madame Soong in Shanghai in honour of Prime Minister and Madame Acharya, the Premier told her: "The Nepalese people know you and have great respect for you." He added: "Please come at any time you like," the news agency said.

Madame Soong said: "I am very grateful to you for your invitation. To promote the friendly relations between the Chinese and Nepalese peoples, I will go."

A peace dove carved in ivory and other gifts were presented to the Nepalese Prime Minister by Madame Soong, who also expressed the hope that the Prime Minister and his wife would revisit China. —France-Press.

UN Security Council Should Be Increased

Reykjavik, Oct. 9. The Foreign Ministers of Scandinavia, which now has no representation on the United Nations Security Council, agreed today that the strength of the Council should be increased from 11 members to 13 because of the growth in general UN membership.

The Foreign Ministers of Norway, Sweden, Denmark, Finland and Iceland decided also to nominate Sweden for the Council seat soon to be vacated by Belgium and to support Finland for membership on the UN Economic and Social Council.

In support of their argument for expansion of the Security Council, the Foreign Ministers pointed out that the membership of the United Nations has increased from 80 countries to 70 since it was formed, and that it probably will reach 75 this year. Over the same period, the membership of the Security Council has remained constant at 11. —United Press.

Saar Solution Opens Door

Paris, Oct. 9. The French Premier, M. Guy Mollet, told the National Assembly's Foreign Affairs Committee tonight that, with the Saar problem settled, the door was open to good relations between France and Germany. Sources close to the committee told reporters: "The Premier denied a Communist Deputy's charge that he and the West German Chancellor, Dr. Konrad Adenauer, had discussed plans to equip West Germany with atomic weapons at their Bonn meeting last month. —Reuter.

Lord Goddard At Service

Sheltered from the heavy rain by an umbrella, Lord Goddard, the Lord Chief Justice, arrives at Westminster Abbey in London for the special service marking the first day of the Michaelmas law sittings. The service was attended by Lords of Appeal, Judges, Queen's Counsel and other members of the legal profession. —Reuterphoto.

Princess Dar Es Salaam

Dar Es Salaam, Tanganyika, Oct. 9. Africans surged round Princess Margaret today — with women doing sinuous dances only a few feet away — when she attended a tribal gathering of about 100,000 people here.

Protocol was cast aside as the Princess climbed from an open car and went straight among the dusty milling crowd of excited people who shouted "Asante" (Swahili for thank you).

The crowds got so wildly excited that the Governor, Sir Edward Twining, motioned the Princess towards the car, which was surrounded by people.

Painted Faces

But Princess Margaret, composed and smiling despite the tremendous heat and crush, turned to a group of dancers from the Belgian Congo and stopped in front of them. The dancers had white painted faces.

Wearing guinea fowl feathered head dresses, the dancers advanced with hips swaying, their breasts covered with odd trinkets—some carried old torches, electric light bulbs and even discarded dolls.

The Princess stood her ground as they advanced to within two feet of her, then swayed back as police moved forward.

Accepted Gifts

Fifteen sweating police then locked arms and surrounded the Princess and pushed back the crowds.

After formal presentations in front of the shaded pavilion, the Princess accepted gifts from the Chiefs.

They included a huge 150-year-old brass-bound Arab chest and an old prayer mat from the Liwali of Morogoro, a ceremonial dagger, initiation drums from Kilosa which are beaten when young tribal women pass.

AN EXILE FLIES HOME

London, Oct. 9. Seretse Khama ended six years of exile in Britain today when he flew from grey, foggy London bound for his home in Bechuanaland.

His English wife, Ruth, their two children, Jacqueline and Ian, and a crowd of English friends waved from a balcony at London Airport as the smiling former chief of the Bamangwato tribe strode out to board an airliner.

It took off after having been held up for 90 minutes by fog. It is due to arrive at Salisbury, Southern Rhodesia, tomorrow.

Seretse, who plans to live a farmer's life among his people, will be joined later by his wife and family.

At the airport, he said he hoped to help his people develop a democratic system, raise their standard of life and establish a happy healthy nationhood. —Reuter.

Brief View

Police on the spot said later that the Princess seemed to enjoy her five minutes among the crowds, who were delighted and went off chattering and cheering.

The crowds were so thick that they obscured the Princess' view of many of the dances, and she only caught a brief glimpse of several. —Reuter.

Road Blocks Set Up In Morocco

Rabat, Oct. 9.

The situation was confused in the southwest of Morocco today when the local population set up road blocks to prevent the movement of French troops and stopped work in several towns in protest against the troop movements.

The Moroccan action began three days ago following the announcement of the arrival in the region, near Agadir and Mogador, of a battalion of Senegalese infantry.

The strikes in Agadir and Mogador ended yesterday but began again in Mogador today. —France-Press.

HEAVY THEFT

Paris, Oct. 9.

The Paris police were today searching for a heavy trailer and mechanical equipment, weighing altogether 43 tons, reported to have been stolen this morning from the Boulevard Haussmann, a smart thoroughfare in the West End of Paris.

The trailer was loaded with wood and coal. The police are looking for a keen driver who, like heavy trucks, has the keys and shovel.

The heavy and shovel were parked in Boulevard Haussmann last night when the driver went off to find a hotel for the night. It had some this morning when he came to fetch it. —France-Press.

Arabs 'Spotlight' Attacks

Beirut, Oct. 9.

FOUR Arab nations published a joint statement here today, aimed at focusing attention of the United Nations Security Council on "attacks" which Israel allegedly has made against Arab countries since 1948.

The four, Egypt, Lebanon, Syria and Jordan, said they had "irrefutable proof" that one of the "attacks", at Haussan on September 25, was "premeditated" by regular Israeli army forces.

The statement said repeated "attacks" since 1948 convinced Arab nations that the "Israeli authorities were attempting to provoke Arab nations into a general war."

The four nations said they reserved the right to take "any steps deemed useful" in conformity with the United Nations Charter.

The statement was drawn up here by Egypt's Ambassador, and Foreign Ministry officials of Syria, Lebanon and Jordan. —France-Press.

DEPRESSED LIVING STANDARDS

Moscow, Oct. 9. Pravda, the Communist Party newspaper, said today that the policy of "driving down the living standards of the working masses."

The newspaper devoted one-third of the page to criticism of various aspects of Japanese life by Viktor Muevsky, chief of the newspaper's Asian Section, who recently visited Japan.

In his article, Muevsky wrote: "In recent years Japan has made considerable progress in its economic recovery and development."

ACCELERATED
The Korean War and the American military orders, the cause with it accelerated the restoration of her industry on a modern technical basis.

"After the Korean War the process of renewing fixed capital continued in the Government planned a policy of granting large credits to Japanese monopolists at the expense of driving down the living standards of the working masses."

The Pravda article is the latest of several to appear recently in the Soviet press about Japan, usually dealing with the American occupation of Okinawa. They are apparently intended to prepare the Soviet people for the forthcoming Soviet negotiations with the Japanese Premier—Reuter.

The Queen Returns To London

London, Oct. 9. Holiday crowds cheered the Queen with Prince Charles and Princess Anne when they returned to London by train this morning from a seven-week holiday in Scotland.

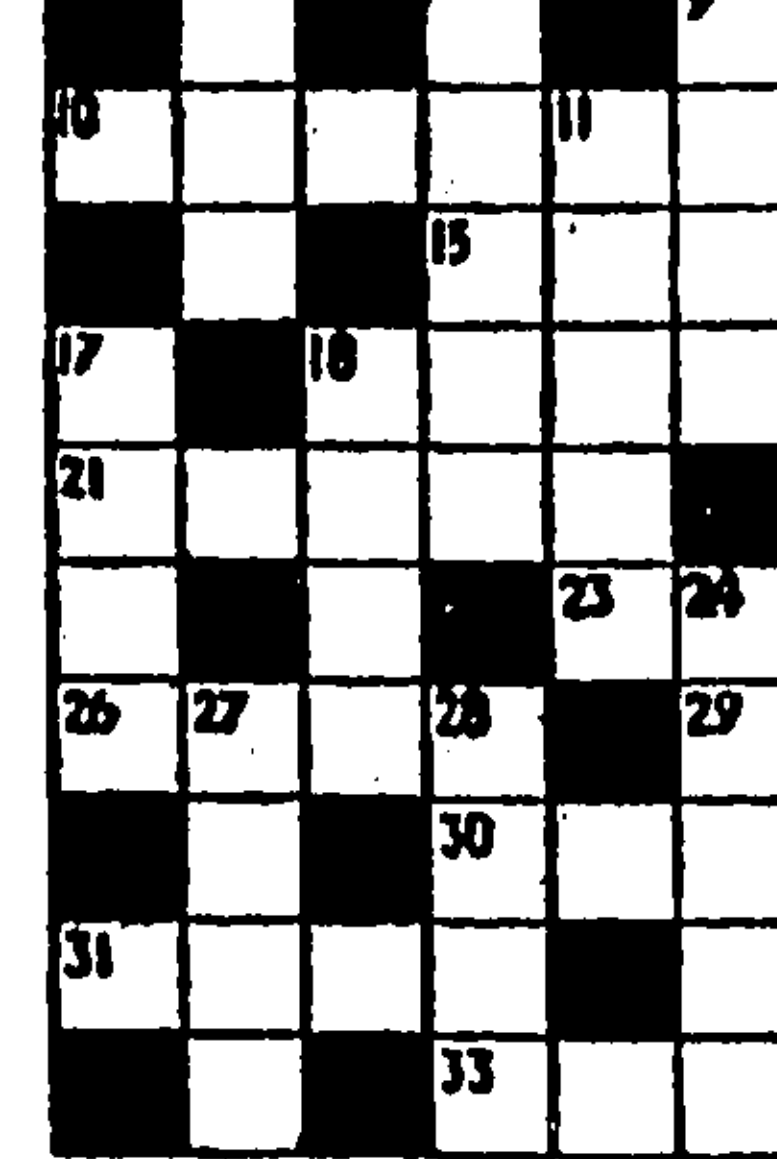

They led five dogs with them along the station's red carpet. The Queen's Corgis, Susan and Sugar, two Corgi puppies, Whiskey and Sherry, and Princess Margaret's Sealham Pippin.

Smiling and waving back to the crowds they drove off at once for Buckingham Palace.

Prince Charles was hatless and wore a grey flannel suit. Princess Anne was in crimson with a matching velvet hat and the Queen in slate blue.

The Duke of Edinburgh who had been shooting in Norfolk is flying back from Norfolk to London later today—Reuter.

ANOTHER EPISODE IN BID AS WORLD LEADER

Washington, Oct. 9. Sir Roger Makins, retiring British Ambassador to the United States, said today that the Suez Canal crisis should be regarded as another episode in the Soviet Union's bid for world leadership.

Sir Roger expressed this view in a farewell speech to the Overseas Writers Association before returning to London this week to assume the post of Joint Permanent Secretary to the Treasury.

Reviewing world events during his four-year tour of duty in Washington, Sir Roger said that the development of the hydrogen bomb by Britain, the United States and the Soviet Union had not simplified the problem of power relationships or the maintenance of world order, although it was widely stated that it had made a major war between great powers impossible to contemplate.

"It has made the problems of national disturbances and local tensions more rather than less difficult," he added.

Complicated
"It has immensely complicated the problems of international and regional defence, and of the establishments needed to ensure it."

"It has perhaps made it easier for little dictators like Nasser to play with fire."

"It poses the whole question of the balance of power. An international sanction to uphold the rule of law is necessary. Yet if armed force is excluded what is this sanction to be?"

"The question is relevant to the assessment which one makes of the significance of the new Soviet policies."

"The present Soviet leaders do not seek to conceal that, whatever the change in tactics, and the attitude to other nations may be, their objectives remain the same, and that their desire still is to undermine the position of the democratic powers of the world and extend Communist domination by all available means."

Muslims and Hindus will vote separately in West Pakistan, but together in East Pakistan.

Suhrawardy said that any other solution was impossible, in view of the fact that the West Pakistan Provincial Assembly was already committed to separate electorates, while the East Pakistan Provincial Assembly had expressed itself in favour of joint electorates.

DILEMMA
In reply to a question, the Premier said that this distinction between the two wings of Pakistan had nothing to do with the dilemma whether Muslims or other minorities constituted one nation, or whether Muslims were one nation and minorities mostly Hindus—another.

The Bill will be presented before the Pakistan National Assembly tomorrow, and will be supported by the governmental majority and a few independents—France-Press.

Pakistan Electoral Compromise

Dacca, Oct. 9. The Pakistani Premier, H. S. Suhrawardy, announced in Dacca today that the Government coalition composed of the Republican Party and the Awami League, had reached a compromise in the matter of electorates.

Muslims and Hindus will vote separately in West Pakistan, but together in East Pakistan.

Suhrawardy said that any other solution was impossible, in view of the fact that the West Pakistan Provincial Assembly was already committed to separate electorates, while the East Pakistan Provincial Assembly had expressed itself in favour of joint electorates.

DILEMMA
In reply to a question, the Premier said that this distinction between the two wings of Pakistan had nothing to do with the dilemma whether Muslims or other minorities constituted one nation, or whether Muslims were one nation and minorities mostly Hindus—another.

The Bill will be presented before the Pakistan National Assembly tomorrow, and will be supported by the governmental majority and a few independents—France-Press.

Part Of Tactic

"It is as a part of this tactic, as well as part of the strategy, of the Soviet Union, that the latest and the most serious crisis of the Suez Canal should be considered."

"I do not suppose for a moment that either Egypt or Colonel Nasser will get any benefit from the seizure of the Suez Canal Company, nor that in the long run the principle of international control will not be re-established."

"The question is how much damage Colonel Nasser can do at the moment, and how much his actions will facilitate the spread of Soviet influence in the Middle East."

"He has throughout been banking on Soviet support, and this has manifested itself in many ways."

"It is therefore as another episode in the Soviet bid for world leadership that the Suez question should be viewed,"—Reuter.

POLITICAL SHAKE-UP EXPECTED IN POLAND

Poznan, Oct. 9. The Central Committee of the Polish Workers (Communist) Party is expected to hold a vital meeting in the near future, probably on October 15.

The meeting will certainly take place before October 18, date of the opening of the Diet (Parliament) session, which should see the voting of a new electoral law for the December general elections.

The expected reintegration of Gomulka, former Secretary-General of the Party, expelled in 1948 and then imprisoned, should mark an important step in the "democratisation" of Poland.

Although Gomulka's present political opinions are almost a total mystery, he is remembered as the man who did not wish to sign Yugoslavia's President, Josip Tito's exclusion from the Cominform, who severely criticised the men who signed for Poland and who opposed extreme collectivisation of agriculture.

Technical conditions of Gomulka's return to the political scene are also a mystery. It is understood that he will not regain his post as Secretary-General of the party, now held by Edward Ochab, and that he will not, on his own initiative, seek to replace Joseph Cyrankiewicz as Premier.—France-Press.

Nationalists Lead Chinese —Chiang

Taipei, Oct. 9. Nationalist Chinese President Chiang Kai-shek today declared that the Nationalist Government was "still able to lead the Chinese people in a determined struggle against the Russian puppet Mao Tse-tung and his cohorts."

Speaking on the eve of the Chinese Double Tenth National Day, Chiang accused the Chinese Communists of turning "everybody on the mainland into expendable tools of Soviet imperialism, with world conquest as the aim."

He denounced the Chinese Communist slogan of "all Communists are of one family" and declared that "national salvation" came first.

The Nationalist leader said the Japanese "war of aggression" gave the Chinese Communists their opportunity to stage a come-back, and denounced them as having "accepted the primitive totalitarianism of Russian imperialism."

He ended with an appeal to the Chinese people to "rebuild a new China."—France-Press.

Unemployment Down

Eisenhower said the Democrats had criticised his Administration for ignoring the workers. He stated in reply that the number of unemployed in the United States was now at a record minimum and that the proportion of the national revenue earned by workers was 70 per cent—the highest percentage recorded over the past 20 years.

He added that his Administration fully respected the freedom of trade unions to negotiate new work contracts with industry.

Middle Of Road

Eisenhower said the struggle for peace was the first consideration of his Government. He rejected once again the suggestions made by the Democratic presidential candidate, Adlai Stevenson, aimed at stopping American thermo-nuclear tests.

He said this was not an electoral issue but concerned the security of the United States.

The President said his Administration's policy was that of the "middle of the road."

He said that for the first time in a quarter of a century, the Americans had enjoyed simultaneously for four years, peace, progress and prosperity.—France-Press.

Bulgarian-Yugoslav Talks Reported A Failure

Belgrade, Oct. 9. The recent Belgrade talks between Bulgarian and Yugoslav Communist Party leaders did not produce satisfactory results, the unofficial Yugoslav news agency, YugoPress, indicated today.

Commenting on the talks, which took place during the visit of a Bulgarian parliamentary delegation to Yugoslavia, YugoPress said the official communiqué issued after the talks merely referred to "a reciprocal agreement for collaboration at a later date."

The agency said: "This communiqué shows that difficulties and differences of opinion cropped up at the Belgrade talks on certain important questions in the field of Socialist practice and theory."

The agency said the introduction of a policy of genuine co-operation would be "long and gradual." In the meantime, current questions in Bulgarian and Yugoslav relations and those of social changes in the two countries will be elucidated, along with points of view and forms of collaboration between the Communist parties.

American swoon pianist Liberace, who has built up a strong following of female fans in the USA, acknowledges applause in the Cafe de Paris, London, last week after making his cabaret debut there. Liberace, as the picture shows, is a somewhat eccentric dresser, and his sartorial tastes and broad smile appear to have alienated some youthful Britons, who appeared outside the scene of a Liberace concert earlier last week bearing anti-Liberace slogans.—Express Photo.

DEMOCRATS POLITICALLY IRRESPONSIBLE SAYS EISENHOWER

Pittsburg, Oct. 9.

President Eisenhower said in a radio-televised speech in Pittsburg tonight that the Democrat Party had shown the worst kind of political irresponsibility in its electoral campaign.

Refuting Democrat criticism of his Administration in his fourth Big electoral speech, Eisenhower said it was untrue that his Government was only interested in the rich. He said that no previous administration had done more than his to apply the provisions of the anti-trust laws.

Replying to the allegation that his Government had done nothing to stop inflation, the President said the cost of living in the United States had risen by only 3 per cent during the past four years, while it had risen 50 per cent between 1945 and 1952, under Democrat administrations.

Russia Sells Uranium NO OBLIGATIONS OR QUESTIONS

Geneva, Oct. 9.

The Soviet Union sells enriched uranium and technical co-operation for atomic energy production to other countries without checking what happens to the uranium afterwards as the United States insists on doing, a high Russian official told Swiss journalists in Moscow recently.

Bernard Begin of the Journal de Geneve, a member of the Swiss group which toured Russia at the invitation of the Soviet Government, organ, Irena, reported today at a conference that Swiss had with Amassap A. Arutunian, director for the Western European section of the Soviet Foreign Ministry and a frequent delegate to international meetings in Geneva, just before their departure from Moscow.

Primed by memories of the violent debate taking place in their own country over conditions set by the US in a still-unratified atomic agreement which some say violates Swiss neutrality, the Swiss pressed Arutunian hard for full information about similar agreements the USSR has made.

No Details
He declined to give them details, Begin reported, but stated flatly that the USSR set no conditions such as the Americans do.

Here are the key statements Begin attributed to Arutunian in direct quotation:

"The USSR has concluded atomic co-operation agreements with several countries, including Czechoslovakia, Yugoslavia, China and Egypt. It does not ask to check on the utilisation of the energy produced. It sets no condition asking that the results of research be communicated."

"We sell uranium either at the world price or at a symbolic price which does not even cover the cost of production, because we consider that this sale creates conditions of equality between the partners, and we set no conditions to find out what happens to it."

All Correct
He said details of the agreements could not be disclosed because they were bilateral and the consent of the other partner would also be required, but assured the Swiss that if they could see the facts, they would find that his statements were all correct.—United Press.

US Magazine To Be Sold In Russia

Moscow, Oct. 9. The illustrated American magazine, America, will again be put on sale in Moscow on October 22, it was learned today.

The distribution of the magazine was halted in 1952 at the height of the "cold war."

Under an agreement concluded last December, between the United States and the Soviet Union, America will be issued again at the same time as a Soviet English-language magazine, the USSR goes on sale in the United States.

The American Embassy in Moscow and the Soviet Government distribution agent, "Soyuzpetchet," have reached an agreement on the sale of America after two months of negotiations.

Some 45,000 copies are to be put on sale, 5,000 others to be distributed to subscribers and 2,000 other copies are to be distributed free to libraries, government agencies and government leaders.

America will be sold for five rubles (about $1.25) a copy, the price of standard Soviet magazines.—France-Press.

NORTH SEA HERRINGS DEPLETED

Copenhagen, Oct. 9. Fishery experts from 15 countries, including Britain and the Soviet Union, today expressed "concern and apprehension" over present herring stocks in the southern part of the North Sea, when the International Council for Exploration of the Sea ended its annual meeting here.

A special committee passed a resolution urging all interested countries to co-operate in a co-ordinated programme designed to determine "the relative magnitude of the various factors" affecting the yield from North Sea herring fisheries.

The committee said herring seem to be changing their migration patterns. Some experts think the large number of young herring caught by Danish and German fishermen is reducing the English fishery.

There were urgent needs for intensification of the "tagging" programme under which about one million herrings have been marked by nylon, wire or pellets over the last eight years.—Reuter.

COASTAL SHELLING

Taipei, Oct. 9. Chinese Communist coastal batteries today broke a month-long lull on the Quemoy Island front when they fired 37 shells at the Nationalist-held offshore island, the Chinese Nationalist Defence Ministry reported tonight.

The Ministry said the Nationalist returned the fire. No casualties or damage were reported on either side.—France-Press.

US Magazine To Be Sold In Russia

Moscow, Oct. 9. The illustrated American magazine, America, will again be put on sale in Moscow on October 22, it was learned today.

The distribution of the magazine was halted in 1952 at the height of the "cold war."

Under an agreement concluded last December, between the United States and the Soviet Union, America will be issued again at the same time as a Soviet English-language magazine, the USSR goes on sale in the United States.

The American Embassy in Moscow and the Soviet Government distribution agent, "Soyuzpetchet," have reached an agreement on the sale of America after two months of negotiations.

Some 45,000 copies are to be put on sale, 5,000 others to be distributed to subscribers and 2,000 other copies are to be distributed free to libraries, government agencies and government leaders.

America will be sold for five rubles (about $1.25) a copy, the price of standard Soviet magazines.—France-Press.

NATHANIEL GUBBINS

A girl has written to an editor complaining that a holiday abroad with a girl friend was not so cheap as they thought it would be.

They had little money left for "having those funny drinks in funny cafes and amusing talk with English-speaking natives."

"By natives I mean fellows, though decent ones, of course," she adds. "We thought that would be part of the fun."

And how right you are, dear. The idea of exchanging amusing but clean cracks with decent male foreigners in cafes is so much more entertaining than trudging round art galleries.

As I understand it your particular problem was to find enough money to buy the funny drinks in the funny cafes at the funny prices charged.

It's easy enough to manage the first two, but after that I suppose you had to look round for a couple of funny, generous foreigners.

My own experience, of course, is that Americans, excepted, are that they are all a bit funny about buying drinks or anything else, even for a attractive, nicely brought up girl like you.

In fact, if your new up-bringing is too obvious, it is doubtful if they will offer you even a cigarette.

So, as you both seem to have been exceptionally unlucky in finding some funny, clean and generous foreigners, don't you think you'd be better off in England next year?

You may find the people and, in some places, the prices just as funny.

Purdah for all

AS I am not one who admires the human face (with a few exceptions) I was so impressed by the charming appearance of the veiled women of Bombay that I am now in favour of everybody going into purdah.

When I say everybody I mean men, and particularly men with big mustaches. Of course I am aware that men love their mustaches. Otherwise they wouldn't grow them. They don't seem to mind if the mustache becomes a rump steamer, is hideously stained with beer, tobacco, and tea, and is probably a germ trap.

I am also aware that wearing purdah over a big mustache might be uncomfortable, but as a slit would have to be cut in the veil for drinking purposes, in fact, the mustache could be worn outside.

As for women I think even the prettiest would look more attractive in purdah. The plain ones, unless they were pebble glasses, could charm simple men with their eyes alone and might even get them as far as the altar if they refused to remove the veil until after marriage.

Purdah for English hunting women should, of course, be compulsory.

As their resemblance to horses has been noted too often I can only add that purdah on them would only look like a nosebag, saving the impression of a horse riding another horse, a nerve-racking spectacle for those who have swallowed too many strap cups.

Earwigs win

YOU might think that when a man begins to wish he had been born an earwig it is time he saw a psychiatrist.

I would have thought the same until I read the private life of an earwig in one of those books about natural history which I believe are now selling better than fiction.

From this it appears that an earwig's life is nearer to the ideal than anything dreamed of in Utopia.

For one thing the little chap does not live long enough to be soured or disillusioned. He is born in the Spring, reaches young manhood about the beginning of August, marries, spends a happy honeymoon under a stone, is slung out of the nest by his wife before the children are born (because she knows he would eat them) and spends a gay bachelor existence until he dies suddenly and painlessly in the late Autumn.

Compare the life of the average earwig with the average man.

The average earwig has one brief honeymoon and never sees his wife again. The average man has one brief honeymoon, and from then on is never allowed out of sight, except to earn money.

The earwig cleverly avoids the responsibility of fatherhood by threatening to eat his children. The man is not only constantly reminded of his responsibility but in collect a monster if he gives his child a well-deserved slap.

Towards the end of his life man becomes siller, each year and tries to avoid the inevitable by going on diets and making himself miserable.

And, like the earwig, he dies, but without the earwig's contemptuous dignity.

'Yes—the rules say you can borrow from my right hand'

MR HARDING (The unrepentant bachelor) GIVES SOME ADVICE on MARRIAGE

'Let the ideal husband hit his wife on the head—occasionally'

His list of grievances is long and catholic. Baby talk, petting in public, dancing in restaurants, anonymous letters, people who interrupt his stories, rounds in pubs, eating in the theatre, autograph hunters, the eleven plus examination, expressions like "spending a penny," official language, electric lights—any of them will send the blood rushing furiously to his head.

His prose style is about as subtle as a blunderbuss. "Of the craven, cowardly, hearted creeps who write abusive anonymous letters I can hardly trust myself to speak," he explodes. "Vulgar, glib and garrulous though I am, words of loathing and contempt fall me when I think of the squalid scribbles who dip their pens in venom with no other desire than to wound without the risk of detection and the horse-whipping which it would be a privilege and public duty to administer."

NO HESITATION

Lack of experience seldom modifies the omniscience of his opinions. An unrepentant bachelor, he has no hesitation in offering advice on marriage and the rearing of children.

"By all means let him hit his wife over the head occasionally," he writes, defining the behaviour of an ideal husband. "I do not advocate complete self-effacement. But I do suggest that to hit her over the head every 10 minutes is not only boorish, but unwarrantably boring."

And here is Harding, the amateur child psychologist. "If you must deny a child something to which he is entitled by your given word, please explain the reasons to him with great care and please make sure the promise is not broken, but only deferred," he says, adding the threat, "Otherwise he may grow up like you."

Harding brandishes his independence like a knuckle duster. He has no hesitation in hitting the hands that feed him. Indeed, it seems to be his favourite diet. From a man whose rotund, substantial figure comes beaming down upon us from thousands of advertising hoardings assuring us of the merits of certain ball pens, writing paper and stomach powders, the following statement can hardly delight his sponsors.

"If you like sob-stuff or snob-stuff, strip cartoons or puns; advertising men alive and alert to your whims will give you just those things as they try to make you believe that smokers of Coffo cigarettes are people of infinite refinement, or that Lavo, used daily will do something remarkable if not regrettable to your appearance."

Nor does the BBC or his work come off any better. Through BBC television, he claims, "this blessed realm is to be dazed, deafened and anaesthetised with village hall variety, turgid chats and snare parlour games."

And his public gets short shrift as well. "Some of our planners are encouraged in their disregard for all viewers by the undeniable fact many viewers are little better than cretins and deserve all they get."

Yet all is not vinegar. Like reluctant icebergs, his delights occasionally rise, lonely and impressive, amid this thick fog of discontentment.

He revels in good talk ("very nearly the last conversation in the world is heard around Lord Reaverbrook's dinner table"), he defends the behaviour of reporters and Press photographers, he has a mania for good food; he likes dogs, thus cancelling out most of his sins in the eyes of the British public he is on the side of taxi drivers.

Try as he might, he cannot disguise the gentle lover of human beings that skulks beneath the gruff exterior. On important things he is usually on the right side. He detests intolerance such as the colour bar; revels in deflating pomposity; runs a constant vendetta against hypocrisy; is truly generous; loves laughter; and does not take himself seriously.

PUB FODDER

His public instinctively feels this about him, though he does his best to deny them any evidence of it.

His magic is that he talks about things everyone can talk about. His opinions are the conversation fodder of the pub and the car park. Anyone can understand Harding. He is the poor man's Chesterton, and they have needed one for a long time.

But in a book full of bright anecdotes Gilbert has left out one of the best. I met him once just emerging from the dressing-room of a star after a first night. He had not liked the performance, but being a personal friend he felt he had to offer some polite words to the star.

"Oscar Levant, the American wit, was once in my position," he told me. "Amid a sea of approval, he sat disconsolately in a corner of a dressing-room. 'Well, Oscar, what did you think of her?' asked someone, noticing his silence. 'I think she stinks,' said Oscar."

"And who the hell was you to say she stinks?" shouted his questioner, in outraged indignation. "And who the hell do you have to be to say she stinks?" was Oscar's reply."

And who the hell do you have to be Gilbert Harding?

CONCLUDING The Expanding Commonwealth

THE PROCESS OF ASSOCIATION

THE Commonwealth of Nations contains no unwilling members, nor at present does it offer membership to any foreign country.

The Commonwealth differs from other international groupings in that it has a common citizenship and its sovereign members can exchange secrets and consult together more intimately and more decisively than is possible for foreign States.

There could be no question of admitting a foreign country to full membership unless its nature and outlook were in harmony with the character and interests of the existing Commonwealth. But if those countries which are already linked with the Commonwealth through international associations for defence or economic co-operation were encouraged to draw closer, a first step would have been taken towards the expansion of the Commonwealth circle.

We have suggested an economic combination of Commonwealth and European nations. We have urged consideration for the expansion of the Colombo Plan. In this, Western European capital and experts might play their part.

At some stage the Commonwealth might wish to institute a form of associate membership. This might be based on an agreement on the lines of the Council of Europe Convention on Establishment. This is a document which pledges preferential treatment over other aliens for the citizens of subscribing countries. Enthusiasts for the Council of Europe have described this as a first step to the creation of European citizenship.

In concluding an agreement of such a kind the Commonwealth and the foreign country concerned would be the better able to decide whether to take the vital step of concluding a citizenship rights. The final stage would be the recognition by the associate member of the Head of the Commonwealth and its acceptance by the existing members expressed in a resolution of the Prime Ministers and endorsed by their Parliament.

The choice then is between expansion and dissolution. The Commonwealth cannot afford to drift. We have shown that it is not impossible to reconcile the process of growth with effective co-operation—indeed such reconciliation is essential if the system is to survive.

If the Commonwealth ceases to expand then will mankind be in danger of ultimate catastrophe. Millions throughout the world look to the Commonwealth for leadership—and the Commonwealth looks to London.

New York. ELDER brother LeRoy Cutler, aged 68, retired last week from General Motors on a pension of $756 a year.

Younger brother Harlow Cutler will retire from the same company in two years' time at the age of 65 with a pension of $68,000 a year.

Why the difference? Harlow is president of the company with a salary of $770,000. LeRoy was a workman.

Fifty years ago things were not too good for the Cutlers. LeRoy and LeRoy had to quit school early and go to work. Harlow went on to high school. LeRoy said at his modest home in Lansing, Michigan: "It was just the break."

Would he swap places with Harlow? "No, I would not have wanted his job—I might not mind the salary."

He is a strong union man—and his pension is the result of negotiations between his union, the United Auto Workers, and his brother.

JACOBY ON BRIDGE

Slam Dream Comes True

By OSWALD JACOBY

WISHFUL thinking is the theme of today's hand. Mickey Miller of Toronto found the winning line of play because there was only one distribution that could give him a chance. He played for that distribution, and his dream came true.

Mickey took it for granted that West's double was based on the queen of trumps and both missing kings. An expert wouldn't have doubted even with all three high cards, but the point was that even the optimistic West player wouldn't have doubled with less.

Mickey knew that he could throw West in with the queen of spades and make him lead away from one of his kings. This would not, however, be enough. He needed a 4-3 break in hearts to produce four tricks in that suit. This would give him four hearts, four trumps, two other aces and the queen of whichever suit West could be forced to lead. The total was still only 11 tricks unless South could also ruff something in the dummy.

In short, Mickey had to execute his throw-in play while he still had A-x-x in both clubs and diamonds. If West failed to lead away from a king, declares would take the queen and ace and would still be able to ruff his other low card in the dummy.

After coming to this conclusion, Mickey was the first to lead with the ace of hearts, discarded a club on the king of hearts, and ruffed a heart. He could not afford to take a second discard.

Then he cashed two top spades and gave West his spade trick. West had to lead a diamond from a king, and the rest of the play went according to plan.

YOUR BIRTHDAY By STELLA

WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 10

BORN today, you are a determined person with a will of iron. Your ambitions are high and you intend to get where you want to go with the least possible delay. You have tremendous talent and once you have channelled it into the right direction, there are few places that you may not go, once you say the word. Rather restless and inclined to be impatient, you must learn to wait for some things before they will come your way. This will yield success eventually.

Fearless when it comes to upholding your convictions, you enjoy the challenge of a good fight or difficult competition. All professions which keep you in constant contact with the public appeal to you and it would be quite impossible for you to settle down happily to any routine desk job. If you must get out on the road, if you decide to write, get a job as a foreign correspondent. If you are on the place, be sure that you have a chance to be in foreign countries, at least part of the time.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 11

LIBRA (Sept. 24-Oct. 23)—Attend an interesting lecture with a friend this evening if you have completed an important job to do.
SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22)—Don't devote too far to the past. Liked your old job, you want to be successful in your efforts today.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 22)—There are excellent business prospects today if you apply yourself to the task at hand and work hard.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 23-Jan. 20)—There are fine opportunities and new inducements for your further progress in your favorite job.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 21-Feb. 19)—If you are in retail merchandising, then this should be a good day for profit. Combine business and pleasure too.
PISCES (Feb. 20-March 21)—You probably will have a sense of good feeling today. The rewards of most work, long overdue, should arrive.
ARIES (March 22-April 20)—Employment matters may take an upward turn for you. A job promotion or the offer of a new job may be the start.

TAURUS (April 21-May 21)—Educational matters may come up for decision. You may be able to increase your earnings by going to school at night.
GEMINI (May 22-June 21)—Duty is not always pleasant, but it can be made more endurable—even enjoyable—by a happy, pleasant attitude toward it.
CANCER (June 22-July 22)—You may be a little more adventurous than usual. If you wish, romance can be exciting, too.
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)—This day offers a fast pace and you will need to speed up to keep up with all that has to offer you. Be aggressive.
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)—Self-discipline and holding your temper is important to the outcome today. Don't let emotions get out of control.

"VERY few women," writes a milliner, "can wear their hats over their noses and get away with it" and she implies them to shove their hats back and expose their foreheads.

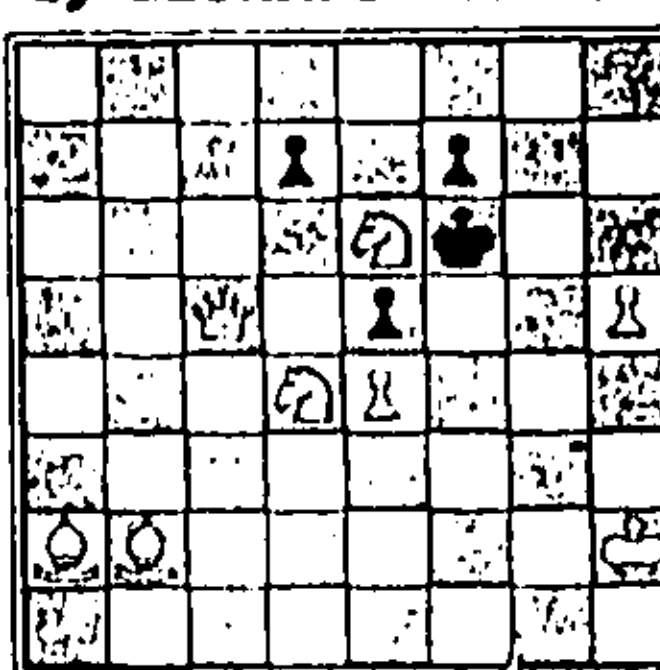

As a man, I am always intrigued by a woman with her hat over her nose. What is she trying to hide? Is it due to sheer coquetry, shyness, a hideous nose, clumsiness, or a sense of convention, high spirits, indifference, or the urge to be different? And is it bad manners to push her hat up, crying keep-be? And which is funnier, a large hat worn over the nose or one of those little pimple-like hats perched over one's ear? The Madison Beachcomber promises for the autumn an all-purpose criss bowler fashioned in a jesset, which can be worn back to front on any part of the head.

Awful Day For Bears

—Polar Bear Isn't Dressed for Warm Weather—

By MAX TRELL

"IT'S a nice, warm day, isn't it?" Knarf, the shadow boy, said to his sister Hanid.

Hanid nodded, saying it was a very warm, pleasant, sleepy summer day.

"But a fine day," said Knarf. "Oh, yes," said Hanid. "It's a fine day, all right."

Knarf started laughing. Hanid looked at him in surprise.

"Do you know why I'm laughing?" he said to her presently.

"No," said Hanid, "and I'd like to find out."

"Well," said Knarf, still chuckling a bit down at the bottom of his throat. "Not everybody thinks it's a fine day, all right."

"Who would that be?" asked Hanid.

Knarf finally stopped chuckling. "I was just down to the zoo. I had a talk with the Polar Bear."

"You didn't," said Hanid. "Do you talk to bears?"

"I did this one," said Knarf. "He was a very pleasant Polar Bear. I went up to his cage and I said, 'Good day, Polar, old boy.' And what do you suppose he did?"

"What did he do?" asked Hanid.

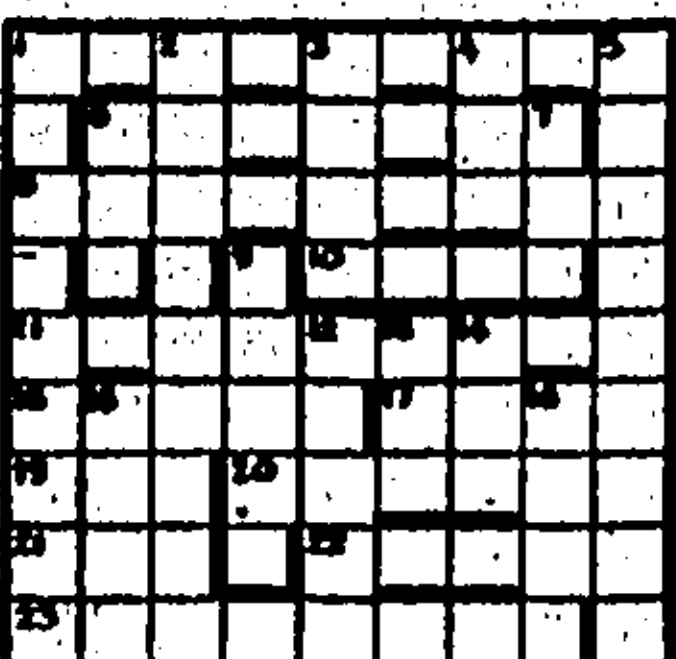

"He growled," said Knarf. "And what do you suppose he growled?"

"I can't imagine," said Hanid. "He growled," said Knarf, "that it wasn't a good day at all. He said that it was an awful day."

"I'm surprised at that," said Hanid. "What didn't he like about the day?"

Knarf started chuckling again but stopped himself. "I guess polar bears don't like the summer, time. They don't like warm, sunny, pleasant, sleepy

FOR THE BEACH

Italian designer Emilio Pucci—the bright new boy in the resort field—showed a short gold lame cape and hood, designed to dazzle on the beach, topping a diminutive playsuit in white and gold. With it came pagan gold sandals, plus clanking ear-rings of gold mesh.

From France, the house of Jacques Fath showed a cape, this time an evening version, cut from a complete circle of white and gold metalasse, sparked with the glitter yarn. The cape coat was quilted to give it extra body and was shown with an elegant short evening gown in the same material.

Ireland chose their traditional balm—unbleached wool tweed—and wove gold thread into it for a full-length dinner gown by Irene Gilbert, topped by a huge, fringed full-length shawl which was decorative as well as heart-warming.

—HAZEL MEYRICK

Great Britain weighed in with a hand-knitted dinner-gown in white boucle wool, trimmed with gold thread embroidery and a creation by Norman Hartnell in pink and gold embossed nylon.

It was America, however, with ten years' start in the field of glitter yarns who showed just what could be done with them—they produced a rainbow of white and gold acetate brocade that looked so glamorous that nobody really cared whether it kept the rain out or not.

I award full marks to American fabric designer Dorothy Liebes who had the wit to weave silver thread into a chunky, rough-hewn black and white tweed fabric, giving it evening appeal.

It was used for a gigantic tweed toga—glorified stole to the uninitiated—worn over a simple black wool skirt and black cashmere sweater. The effect was terrific, and proved once again that tweed can take you anywhere—if you know how to use it.

GLITTER TWEEDS

I'm told that new glitter tweeds are on their way into the shops, and I've culled from the designers some ways of using them:

Back a sparkling tweed stole with gold lame, to match it to a gold lame cocktail dress... make a completely reversible topcoat cut on simple edge to edge lines, of plain tweed for everyday, reversing into its glittering counterpart for special occasions... star for super-sophisticated parties—a gold lame top and button-through skirt over skin-tight, pirate pants of glittering tweed... cut a cardigan of sparkling tweed on simple dolman-sleeve lines, edge it with hand-knitted wool and Lurex ribbing.

THREE GAMES EACH NOW DODGERS WIN A GREAT MATCH TO SQUARE WORLD SERIES

By OSCAR FRALEY

Brooklyn, Oct. 9.

Aging Jackie Robinson slashed a clutch single which broke a 10th inning scoreless tie and defeated the New York Yankees, 1-0, today to square the World Series for the Brooklyn Dodgers at three games each.

Robinson, nearing the end of the baseball hall, had left five base runners stranded previously against the 95-mile-an-hour fast ball of bullet Bob Turley. But finally, with two out in the 10th inning and two men on via walks, the man who broke baseball's colour line banged out the hit which carried Len Labine to victory in the first World Series shutout at Ebbets Field in 36 years.

It was a heart-breaking blow to Turley, for the big man had struck out 11 Dodgers hitters in 33,224 innings, breathing life into Brooklyn's back-to-the-wall battle to remain alive in the annual classic. Until the 10th, Turley had given those grim-faced Dodgers only three hits.

But then with Junior Gilliam straining off second from a walk and Duke Snider at first on an intentional pass, old Jackie walloped the big blow which gave Labine a seven-hit victory in what was only his third complete game in five years.

It was a fierce pitching duel under full blue skies. The only run, Turley and his co-pitcher Labine, pitched a perfectly pitched game, following Yankees' Don Larsen's perfect no-hitter yesterday.

SCORELESS TIE

Only once before, in the second game of the 1953 Series, when the Giants scored three runs in the 10th, to beat the Athletics, 3-0, had there been a scoreless tie for one frame.

Labine sent those long-swinging Yankees down in order in the top of the 10th, and then Turley went to the hill again. The big fellow, who had struck out 11 men to that point, refused Labine but then played the way for his own defeat as he issued a walk to wayward Junior Gilliam.

Pee Wee Reese tried to beat out a bunt but was out at first as Gilliam moved up to second. Then it was the menacing Snider stepping up to the plate and Turley was ordered to give him an intentional pass, with first base open.

That brought up Robinson, the veteran third baseman who may call this his final year. The count went to one strike and one ball. Then Robinson added another line to his baseball saga with a chip-sauce drive that the rapping Country Slaughterer missed as Gilliam reeled home with the winning run.

It also wrapped up for the 30-year-old Labine the first World Series shutout at Ebbets Field since 1920, when Burleigh Grimes of these same embattled Dodgers beat Cleveland, 3-0, and there have been 23 World Series games played in Brooklyn since then.

The Yankees, shooting to wrap up their seven world championship in 10 years, gave Labine a bitter run for it. Eight times they had men at base—and every time the calm right-hander, who is used to having base runners at his back as a bullpen specialist, left them stranded.

A DOUBLE PLAY

The Yankees had beaten slender Clem in 1953 to clinch the series and, with thoughts still on Larsen's perfect game, they made certain immediately that Labine wasn't going to have one. Hank Bauer, the first batter of the day, opened with a single to centre and ruined any such thoughts Labine may have had, although he was immediately erased from the bases when Joe Collins hit into a double play.

But neither did Turley's no-hit ambitions last beyond the first inning. He was using the same "no windup" delivery as Larsen had but, with two away, Snider reached him for a first inning single to end a string of 30 consecutive Dodgers outs.

The Yankees were right back at Labine in the second inning when Yogi Berra led off with a line drive against the right field fence, but was held to a single by the expert manner in which Carl Furillo played the wall.

Labine got out of it again when Slaughter forced Berra and the next two men went down in order.

Again in the third, they were after Clem, who made only three starts in 62 games he appeared in for the Dodgers this year. But he was two away when Bauer and Collins slapped back-to-back singles and Mickey Mantle grounded out.

Turley survived a weird inning in the Brooklyn third when, with one out, Slaughter lost Gilliam's easy fly in the sun. But Junior tried for two and Slaughter threw him out. Then Reese, ducking in from a pitch, pointed to Collins behind first as the ball accidentally struck his bat.

UNRUFFLED MOTION

Labine, pitching with an easy unruddled motion, got the first two men in the sixth before Berra doubled into right centre and the pressure tightened and the pitcher tightened. But Labine's easy walk from the bullpen usually are made with men on the scales, got Billy Martin on a foul pop to Robinson.

Turley turned back another bit too, in that inning as Gilliam led off with a walk, but Reese, attempting a sacrifice bunt, popped to Berra. Snider walked, moving Gilliam to second, and Junior became the first Dodger to reach second base in 14-2-3 innings. The threat was choked off when Robinson and Hodges both popped up.

Once more in the eighth, both teams threatened those labouring hurlers. The Yankees made their bid with one runner in, Collins doubled high off the right field scoreboard. Mantle was given an intentional walk but the threat ended as Berra flied out to shallow centre and Slaughter grounded out.

In the Brooklyn half, Labine tried to help himself with a well-hit fly ball just inside the foul line, which bounced into the left field stands for a ground-rule double. But Clem, impatiently kicking the bag in his bright blue warm-up jacket, died there. Gilliam fouled off two sacrifice bunt attempts before striking out. Reese followed with a fly to shallow centre. Snider drew an intentional pass to the open first base, and Robinson flied again as he popped to Andy Carey.

The Yanks went down in quick order in the top of the 10th and Labine, always a clutch pitcher as he had proved long ago in a second game play-off victory against the Giants in 1951, drew a tremendous ovation as he went to the plate. They were cheering him, even when he popped to Martin at second.

Then Turley, who had walked six men through those first nine innings while fanning 11 with that blazing fast ball, lost his own great effort. He walked Gilliam, gave Reese sacrifice him alone gave up that intentional pass to Snider—and then he was looking down the lane at Robinson.

And Jackie took it from there. He looked at a low outside pitch, fouled one off, and then squared the series with the ball that broke Turley's heart. Dodgers manager Walt Alston, back even again after losing three in a row, said that in the seventh and final game tomorrow he once again would give 27-game winner Don Newcombe—who was keyed in the second game—a chance to win the big one, which always has eluded him.

For the Yankees it will be 18-game winner Johnny Kucka, Yankees skipper Casey Stengel said, "unless I change my mind."

EVEN MONEY

New York, Oct. 9. It was "even money" tonight in man-to-man betting for tomorrow's seventh and deciding game of the Yankees-Dodgers World Series at Ebbets Field. Bookies quoted the "11-10 and pick 'em" which meant that a bettor of either the Yanks or Dodgers would have to wager $11 against a bookie's $10.

Those odds were based upon the expectation this Johnny Kucka would pitch for New York against Don Newcombe, Casey Stengel said he expected to start Kucka. "Unless I change my mind."

But there was a strong belief in betting circles that Stengel would change his mind and start Whitey Ford, who lasted three innings in the first game but went the distance in the third contest and won. If Ford is the starter, the Yanks will be a slight favourite, man-to-man, at 11-10, and bookies will quote "even-six." They will take even money from Dodger adherents and six-bucks to five from Yankee backers.

Before today's Dodger victory, the Yanks were 10-6 favourites for the Series.—United Press.

'Don't Blame Me' Says Angry Ted Drake; Chelsea Offer Him A New Contract

By ALAN HOBY

Is Ted Drake on the way out? Seventeen months ago he was on top of the football world. He had led Chelsea to their first League Championship. He had stopped the music-hall jokes. He had made the boys in blue the finest fighting outfit in the country.

But now success has turned sour on the Chelsea boss. Nobody has a good word for him. He is getting the rough end wherever he goes.

Indeed, people are asking—especially Chelsea people—is success worth it? What is the use of turning a happy-go-lucky club into a Championship-winning side if this is the end result?

They recall some of the things that have happened since Drake took over the manager's chair at Stamford Bridge.

How, because it made Chelsea the butt of the stage comics, he got rid of the "Pensioners" picture on the club programme—and the row it caused.

How he and his team were accused of smash-bash play and rough tactics.

How long-established stars like Roy Bentley (now, of course, with Fulham), Eric Parsons, Johnny McNichol, and Bill Robertson were suddenly told that Chelsea were prepared to part with them. In other words, they could go!

TALL STORIES

No wonder the tall stories about Ted Drake multiplied. No wonder more and more people in soccer began to ask: Does Drake still have the confidence of his directors? Even more important, does the present Chelsea team believe in him?

For, take it from me, these questions are being asked—and let me say right away that I think they are unfair—both to Drake and to Chelsea.

Take point No. 1: That Drake doesn't enjoy the trust of his board, that he is in danger of being fired. What rubbish!

In fact, I can reveal that, far from giving their manager the boot, the Chelsea directors, headed by chairman Joe Mears, have such complete faith in his drive and ability that they have offered him a new long-term contract, even though his current agreement still has time to run.

Far from finishing with Chelsea, Ted Drake is just starting! "I'll be here for many years to come," he told me when I called on him last week.

Point No. 2: That Drake and his present team don't click. This is even bigger nonsense.

Drake's youngsters like him. They admire him. They would run themselves into the ground for him. Then what really started all the trouble?

You'll write precious little out of Ted Drake. He's so loyal he'll never say a word in his own defence if it means hurting anyone else. But I have my own ideas as to what first blew the thunderclouds over Chelsea.

Anyone who knows Drake knows that the one thing he would never tolerate in his team is anything less than 100 per cent effort.

That's how he expects others to play. Thank how he played himself when he was Arsenal, and England's centre-forward—until a serious spinal injury forced him to quit.

Indeed, so furiously did he throw himself into every game, so lion-hearted was his spirit on the field, that he soon became known as the most knocked-about star in soccer.

DYNAMIC CAREER

During his dynamic career this one-time gas meter inspector from Southampton had two cartilage operations as well as going under the anaesthetic for hernia.

He fractured two wrist bones during one game, but insisted on continuing. He also broke his nose, suffered frequent cuts about the face, and once, after a collision, was carried off by Tom Whittaker, then the Arsenal trainer, with a cut in his head that needed nine stitches.

Today's same burning intensity of purpose strokes the black-haired, blue-eyed Drake.

That's why if he ever thought—lightly or wrongly—that there was an air of 85 per cent among some members of his team, he wouldn't hesitate to call them into the office and give them a whole of a lumping.

That's my theory on the whole watched business. In fact, it's my guess that when Drake kicked them off some of them didn't like it.

I asked Drake if he was worried over the hard times that have been said about him. "Worried?" he said. "Why should I be? Some of the things that have been said about Chelsea are a downright disgrace, but my conscience is clear."

"I have nothing to blame myself for. Every single member of my playing staff from the boy who sweeps the terraces to the oldest star has every consideration."

CRUSADING CHARACTER

I left this unquenchable, crusading character marvelling at his confidence after taking a hammering which would have crushed weaker clay.

Indeed, I can pay Ted Drake no higher compliment than to say that if they could lay bare his heart they would probably find one word written on it—Chelsea.

YESTERDAY'S RUGGER

Police Fully Deserved Their Victory

By "PAK LO"

In the first half of the rugby match played yesterday evening on the Police ground in Boundary Street, it looked as if the result predicted in this column was going to be very sadly out, for the Airmen, playing against the dazzling sun, were seldom out of the Policemen's half of the field.

After half time, however, the Police forwards came to life with a suddenness which not only surprised spectators but also the RAF Mainland, and when the Police ran off the field the victors by 8 points (1 goal, 1 try) to nil they fully deserved their victory.

There was little to choose between the two sides in the first half, but the Airmen when they got the ball made far more use of it than did the Police, for D. M. Miller at fly half for the Police played a perfect wing forward's game but a very poor fly half's game.

He started his three to such an extent that in the first half the Police three never moved, for the simple reason that they never had the ball.

Lewis had a disappointing game due to two factors. One was the slowness of his forwards to heel the ball and the other was the fast breaking of the RAF wing forwards, Tuton in particular, which gave him no chance to get the ball moving.

FAR TOO MUCH

The RAF on the other hand, hooked well and the halves got the ball out cleanly but the three kicked for touch which, incidentally, they seldom made, far too much, especially as they were, in the first half, always on the attack.

Had the RAF wings in the first half had more of the ball the result would have been very different.

Of all the players who stood out, such as Johnston, Scott, Lloyd of the Police, and Tuton, Brown and Macnamara of the RAF there was one man who completely outshone the whole lot.

Walker of the Police played the game of his life, and was responsible for not only the first score but for maintaining the pressure on the Airmen which so upset their calculations.

In fact after this game I would suggest that the Police try out Walker as their pack leader, for if he can lead as well as he played the Police need have no more worries about their forwards.

It is, so I have been told, seldom that I chapsodise about a player, but I feel I must do so about Walker who was on yesterday's play an absolute certainty for a Colony cap.

Throughout the game the Police had a slight advantage in the scrums and the lineouts, but in the second half their bustling forwards demoralised the RAF pack with the exception of Tuton, who broke through, then passed inside to Walker, and the latter with a sudden burst of speed outpaced the defence and went round to score under the posts.

The kick which sailed over the crossbar was disallowed as the referee decided that the player had allowed the kicker to put the ball on the ground. 3-0.

TOOK COMMAND

Then a few minutes later came the try of the match. Lloyd had moved up to scrum half to replace Lewis who had retired due to injury, and, receiving the ball from the scrum, he evaded the opposing wing forwards and seemed set to go through on his own.

The defence moved across to stop him, and a beautiful scissors movement which left Miller in possession completely upset the defence.

Miller broke through a tackle and passed on to Harris. The ball then went to Cunningham and finally to Marsh who scored under the posts. Marsh also converted to make the final score 8-0. With the Police still attacking the game finally ended.

HORSE RACING

Papilio's Ascot Form May Prove Unreliable Says RICHARD BAERLEIN

The victory of Sir Humphrey de Trafford's seven-year-old Papilio in the Gordon Carter Handicap at Ascot recently should in my opinion be treated with extreme caution when related to his Cesarewitch chance. Too many good horses were beaten out of sight for the race to have much form value.

True Cavalier, for instance, had only just passed the distance post as Papilio was crossing the winning line. Yet in the Ascot Gold Cup True Cavalier finished within six lengths of the winner.

Admiral Byrd, a consistent winner over a distance, was likewise beaten a furlong, and the Doncaster winner, Casals, was even further behind.

There had been no market move for Papilio for the Cesarewitch, or for this race, and Dettler, who finished some way in front of him at Kempton, met him on 5lb. better terms, but was unable to confirm the form.

DROPPED 5LB.

The race was, in fact, a fluke result, though Papilio is undoubtedly coming back to form. He could not win the Cesarewitch as a four-year-old, and it will be surprising if he can win now, though he has gone down 5lb. in the handicap.

For some time I have advised readers to regard Fractorian as a probable runner, who is likely to start a short-priced favourite. Nothing has happened since to alter that opinion, and when Eph Smith is booked to ride, Fractorian will shorten further. Anyone who can still get 100-8 about him should do so, for there should be ample opportunity to hedge the bet.

SOUND OPPOSITION

Seldom has a horse won such a valuable race against sound opposition with such ease yet without any Compensating penalty being earned as Money to Burn did in the Doncaster Stakes at Ayr.

At the moment there is little encouragement to look beyond her for the Cambridgeshire winner, but I have no doubt that in time this notoriously difficult handicap will gradually appear more open.

SOCCER NEWS

Jimmy Seed Certain To Be Back In League Football Soon

Says JAMES CONNOLLY

Take it as certain that Jimmy Seed, former Charlton boss, will be back in League football soon. He has had offers of several jobs in the past few days. Spurs, the club Jimmy served so well as a player years ago, fancy his gift for finding, not buying stars.

He had a long session with Spurs' officials recently. With Seed talent spotting at White Hart Lane, manager Jimmy Anderson would have time for administration work and his assistant Bill Nicholson could then concentrate on coaching.

Bad news for Fulham fans is that Bedford Jezzard, who broke his ankle on the FA South African Tour this summer, won't be back before Christmas at the earliest.

The ankle break has healed well and Jezzard is now playing golf, but the torn ligaments need time.

Until Jezzard reports fit his wages and medical bills are paid under the FA insurance, but lackless Fulham get no compensation for his absence from the team.

They might raise this point with the FA later on. "The injury was a great job to our hopes," said chairman Charles Dean, "and it shook the morale of the team."

"Another repercussion was that Johnny Haynes, knowing that we needed him, played before his ankle had fully recovered. Our gates also suffered."

"I feel that the scope of the insurance on players in international service should be widened to compensate clubs for the loss of their services if they are injured."

ONE GOOD EFFECT

The rampant Irish hooliganism with his club when he asked for a transfer has had one good effect for the Notts County inside man.

It has reminded the Scottish selectors of his claims for a place in their team.

They will watch him before next month's match with Wales.

Irish international Johnny McKenna was signed two seasons ago as a stand-in at Blackpool for Stanley Matthews.

Now Johnny doesn't get a place in any of the Lancashire club's four teams. I'm sure that Blackpool are ready to talk business.

Manchester City and Portsmouth follow the same track on their Irish scouting jaunts. They want Linfield right-winger Jimmy Hill. His price is around £10,000.

Also searching in Ireland are Liverpool and Arsenal. They fancy Albert Curry, Bangor's centre-forward.

Curry himself wants to go into Scottish soccer with Glasgow Rangers. Liverpool have already made a £6,000 bid.

STRAIGHT TALKING

Stoke City manager Frank Taylor did some straight talking when full back Jack Short reported for training at Stoke last week for the first time this season.

Short who cost around £10,000 from Wolves two years ago wanted to live and train at his home near Burnley. Stoke wouldn't have that.

When Short eventually reported to Stoke, some two months behind schedule, manager Taylor told him: "We will agree to your transfer request. We don't want to keep an unhappy player. But remember it is easier to sell a first-team player."

"If you fight your way back into the League side—and I think you can—we won't go back on our word."

But are coming in fast for Manchester United starlets, who are crowded out of the club's youngest-ever first team.

Jackie Blanchflower, for instance, is Ireland's centre-half, but he is in United's second string. Says manager Matt Busby: "I need them all, but I wouldn't stand in the way of any boy who feels he could do better with another club."

Athletics Season Will Start This Month

The first full-scale meeting of the new Hongkong Amateur Athletic Association season will take place either at the Hongkong Stadium at Soekunpo or at the Army athletic ground, Boundary Street, on Sunday, October 28.

All the events that go into a full scale athletic meeting are on the programme with the exception of runs longer than 5,000 Metres, the Steeplechase and walking races.

The entry fee will be $2 per event and entries with fees enclosed should reach the Hon. Secretary, HKAAA, P.O. Box 280, by 5 p.m. on October 10. Prizes in the form of suitable souvenirs will be presented to the winner in events in which there are no more than four competitors, to the winner and runner-up in events in which there are five to 11 competitors and to the first three in events with 12 or more competitors.

The new athletic season starts with talent almost completely unknown as most of the outstanding athletes of last season have left the Colony or have retired from active athletics. Most of the events will, therefore, be very open.

If there is sufficient support for athletics this season, the HKAAA proposes to have three full scale Open Meetings in place of the usual one per season in addition to the normal annual HKAAA programme which includes the Colony Championships, Novices Championships, Colony Pentathlon Championships and HKAAA 10 Miles Road Race.

The Colony Championships have been set for March 24 and 31, and will this season follow the Land Forces Individual Championships on March 15.

IF NOT ENOUGH

For members of the Services as well as civilians who like to have more athletics than the normal HKAAA programme offers—and particularly for those interested in Pentathlons—the Hongkong Amateur Club will, as usual, do its best. But more meetings will depend on the Club's active membership roll.

Membership in the HKAAA is not limited to champion athletes. All-rounders, athletes who can participate in more than one event and particularly fair allrounders in the field events are particularly welcome, for such are teams built. HKAAAC entry forms can be obtained from the Hon. Secretary, HKAAA, c/o The China Mail, Wanchung Street, Hongkong.

At its Annual General Meeting last week, the Hongkong Amateur Athletic Club elected the following Committee: Chairman, Mr. J. E. P. Binkins; Vice-Chairman, Mr. J. E. P. Binkins; Secretary, Mr. J. E. P. Binkins; Treasurer, Mr. J. E. P. Binkins; Hon. Secretary, Mr. J. E. P. Binkins; Hon. Treasurer, Mr. J. E. P. Binkins; Hon. Secretary, Mr. J. E. P. Binkins; Hon. Treasurer, Mr. J. E. P. Binkins.

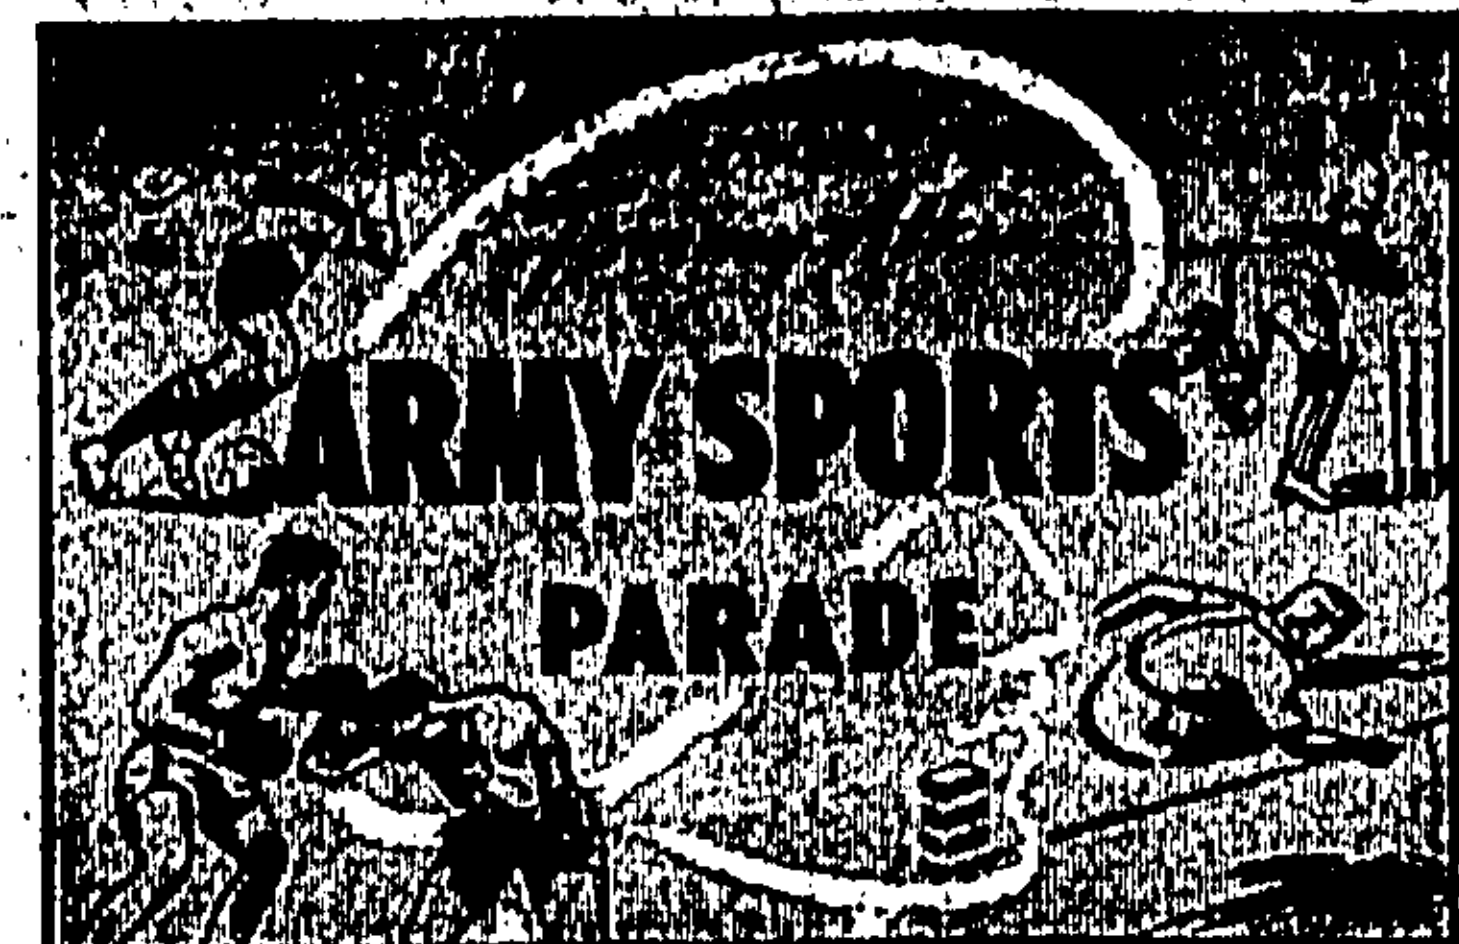

Mr. J. E. P. Binkins and Mr. J. E. P. Binkins were elected to the Club's representatives on the Executive Committee of the HKAAA.

TEAM PENTATHLON

The annual Inter-Club Team Pentathlon Match will be held some time in November. HKAAAC Mount Davis who participated in this event last year and produced the individual highest score in Cpl. Brian McGarrity, have already signified their intention of taking part again.

Last year's team champions were the HKAAAC who won by a narrow margin of six points from RAF Mount Davis. The Hongkong University Athletic Club and the South China Athletic Association will be the other teams taking part in this quadrangular match.

Four teams are as many as can be handled in a match of this nature in one afternoon and further entries will not be accepted. However, any other Services units which would like to participate in such a match may write to the Hon. Secretary, HKAAAC, and another Pentathlon team match may be arranged.

There is an unusual twist about the two personalities in the Spot of Honour at the Top of the Sports Parade this week for they are cricketers who share the 'Spot' on the strength of performances made during the same match in which they were on opposite sides.

When Army South overhauled their North colleagues in a First Division Match on Sunday much of their success sprang from the fact that opening bat Withall, after contributing 60 runs to the total of 163, took over the ball and so baffled the opposition with his spinners that he finished up by taking 6 wickets for 11 runs.

In spite of his side's uphill fight North's Greenhalgh—a great hearted bowler if ever there was one—showed his class in taking eight South wickets for 55 runs.

These were two fine performances in a match that hardly lived up to expectations.

Popular Army athlete Capt. John Hunter, RAMC, was elected Vice-Chairman of the Hongkong Amateur Athletic Club when it held its AGM last week.

Although this is essentially a column dealing with the achievements of Army sportsmen we have—over time to time—devoted considerable space to reporting the successes of service sportsmen from the Royal Navy and the Royal Air Force. There has always been some connection between these men and Army sport in Hongkong and I am sure many soldier sportsmen will derive satisfaction from the following good news of a young airman who won the acclaim and respect of all who came in contact with him during his period of service in this Colony.

Many of you will remember Dave McLaren who played many fine games in goal for the Royal Air Force, the Combined Services, and for Hongkong.

NEW PERSONALITY

Dave is now back home in Scotland and he made his first team debut for Dundee in their game against Hearts at Edinburgh on September 29, but now I quote from a press report: "A new personality burst like a bomb into Scottish football at Tynecastle. Dave McLaren's name Dundee's 6 ft. 3 in. keeper from Auchterarder, making his League debut, dominated the game like the giant he is."

"Such was the impact of his performance, both Willie Bauld and keeper Willie Duff rushed to congratulate him at the finish, and the crowd of 30,000 remained behind to give him the greatest ovation a visiting player has received at Tynecastle in years."

What a pleasure it is to be able to report the realisation of a young man's ambitions, particularly when he is such an exemplary sportsman as Dave McLaren. Army sportsmen who knew him will share the satisfaction of his success.

The Land Forces Swimming Championships got off to a good start at the Sek Keng Pool yesterday when a series of eliminating heats were staged. The setting and conditions at Sek Keng were ideal and they certainly seemed to suit Sgt. Falcini, the Colony Junior 100 Yards Free Style Champion, who had easy victories in both the 100 and 200 yds. Free Style events.

During recent months Army motor cyclists have been working hard to get their machines ready for the various minor formations in the Colony. Many of these events have been excellent affairs but they have really all been leading up to the Land Forces Championship which will be staged at Shatin on Wednesday, October 17.

Many of us who remember the efficiency and general smoothness of this Trial last year will look forward to it with special pleasure, while spectators and competitors who are attending for the first time will see much to admire in both the organisation and the skill of the riders.

This year the event will take the competitors over two timed road and cross-country circuits where they will encounter the wiles of the hazard fixers on 20 occasions, although these hazards have been so arranged that they will provide a total of 28 observed sections. The tribulations of the riders will start with an initial inspection and a technical hazard in the assembly area at 1000 AOP, and just as though there and the double circuit are not too tough for man and machine, a further final inspection will be carried out when the competitors return to the finishing point at Shatin.

It looks like being another great day for the motor cyclists.

EXPECTED NAMES

Although the entry list shows fourteen teams—incidentally the same number as last year—some of these teams are missing. Notable among the absentees are 1 Northampton, 1 North Blaine, 1 RAMC and 1 RASC. The first round has to be completed by October 30, the

LOOKING AT SPORT

LAWN TENNIS MUST HAVE OPEN TOURNAMENTS FOR BETTER ENTERTAINMENT

Says DENNIS HART

It was well after midnight. For most Londoners the Saturday night out had ended, or was ending, as they made their way home. But at the great indoor sports arena at Wembley thousands still sat, enjoying a game of tennis.

The last buses and trains had gone, many faced a long walk home, but still they sat. For this was no ordinary game of tennis. It was the fiercest, fastest match of the year, the final of the London Professional Tournament between "Pancho" Gonzales and Frank Sedgman.

The match began shortly after half past nine on Saturday evening. It ended at twenty minutes to one on Sunday morning.

And besides the thousands present at the Wembley arena it was seen by television viewers all over the country. British television normally closes down at about eleven o'clock. It was due to have closed down at eleven that Saturday. But commentators, technicians, transmitters were kept going until Gonzales had smashed the winning shot.

For this was no ordinary game of tennis. Wonderful entertainment, and something more. A further argument, if it were needed, that tennis must have 'open' tournaments.

Until recently amateur tennis could quite well get along on its own. The professionals could boast at most only a couple of world class players.

THE CLASS FORCE

Not now. The professionals are the class force. Sedgman played far better tennis than when I saw him win the Wimbledon title four years ago. He was even faster at the net, and his ground shots were far crisper. Yet he lost.

Indeed, based on the other week's performances, a world ranking list of all players could include only two amateurs—Lew Hoad and Ken Rosewall—in the first six. The other places would be filled by Gonzales, Sedgman, Pancho Segura and Tony Trabert.

That is food for thought for the amateur bosses. And to heap a bit more on their plate we must consider what the position would be if Hoad and Rosewall turned pro, a move which would not come as a surprise to anyone.

The national tournaments of the world would then be fought out by such players as Vic Seixas, Budgie Patty, Jaroslav Drobný, Ashley Cooper, Neel Fraser, Ham Richardson and Sven Davidson. The first three have been great players, but are past their best. The others promise to be first class players. But as yet none has the stamp quarter-finals by December 3 and the semi-finals by December 31. The final is scheduled to take place on January 16, 1957.

No matches have been played to date but a start will be made tomorrow when Victoria meet REME Workshops at Happy Valley at 5 p.m.

As the China Mail enjoys wide circulation in the New Territories there is a strong temptation not to mention a word about cricket this week. Army North 'A' had their blackest week-end since the side was formed a couple of seasons ago. The strange thing is that it is the batting which has failed to reach the required standard for it was thought this would be the strong department in the team. The heavy defeats suffered at the hands of Rereale and Army South were unexpected, but the experts seem satisfied the side 'will come again'.

of a Sedgman or a Gonzales, or of a Hoad or Rosewall.

The danger, then, is that the bottom may be knocked out of the great world tournament circuit. Even Wimbledon, the most glamorous and glorious of all annual sporting events, would lose its glitter if spectators knew that the winner would not rank in the world's top six.

PROFESSIONAL RANKS

And matters may not rest there. As more of the top amateurs are tempted into the professional ranks while still in their prime, and come before they reach their prime, the amateur game could become "second class."

Remembering the great traditions and epic struggles seen at Wimbledon, Forest Hills and in the Davis Cup, this would be nothing less than a sporting tragedy.

The solution is to throw the tournament open to all players, whether they are paid by declared salary or undeclared expense account.

Would the game itself suffer? What brand of play would the professionals bring to Wimbledon's Centre Court?

At Wembley we saw that in the exhibition games the professionals produced the old fashioned all-court game which is so easy on the eye. In the knock-out tournament, however, when they fought for a first prize of £425 the gloves were off. Batlines were short and furious. It was kill or be killed and in that memorable final both Gonzales and Sedgman would stand a foot inside the base line to take second service. And they are two of the hardest servers of all time. It was intimidating tennis.

But, come to think of it, is it so very different from Wimbledon? There is a difference, but only of degree rather than of method.

RUSSIAN NEIGHBOURS IN ANTARCTIC

Great Progress Made In Aussie Territory

Melbourne, Oct. 9.

Science has provided a common meeting ground in the Antarctic for men from diplomatically estranged Soviet Russia and Australia. As guests of Australia on polar territory, the Soviet party at Mirny is only a little more than four hours' jet flying time from the Australian mainland.

The township of Mirny, built by the Russians in the ice on the frozen coast of Queen Maryland, is 800 miles to the east of the Australian station at Mawson.

Heavy motor lorries, amphibious vehicles, sledge teams and light cars rumble up and down the ice streets. Electric lights shine on blocks of flats, dormitories, and store houses.

At an airfield is an impressive fleet of two helicopters, a light cabin aircraft, two transport aircraft of the DC3 type, and a big Ilushin passenger aeroplane of the Convair type. Fitted with skis, these aircraft run on an airfield to a newfound Soviet party wintering in the interior.

AMBITIOUS BASE

Mirny is a very ambitious base, according to the director of Australian Antarctic Research, Dr. Philip Law, who was a guest of the Russians early this year. "They have 80 men, where at Mawson we have only 20."

"In size, they compare with the United States expedition on the other side of the continent."

"I believe Mawson is technically the most advanced station in the Antarctic, but the Russians are on the way to rivaling it."

Mirny is the starting point for Russia's Antarctic projects in the International Geophysical Year in 1957-58. Behind the base, which huddles for shelter in rocky gullies, rises the massive Helen Glacier leading to the interior.

The winter temperature at Mirny hovers around 20 degrees below freezing and winds reach 130 miles an hour. The hinterland, a hilly and rugged terrain formed by Queen Maryland
Wilhelm II Land and the South Pole, contains some of the wildest country in the Antarctic continent.

REMOTE PART

The Russians are making plans to reach the centre of the great ice plateau with a big aircraft and build two bases in unexplored territory. These will be called Sovetskaya and Cosmoport. One will be 600 miles from Mirny, near the South Magnetic Pole, and one near the real Pole.

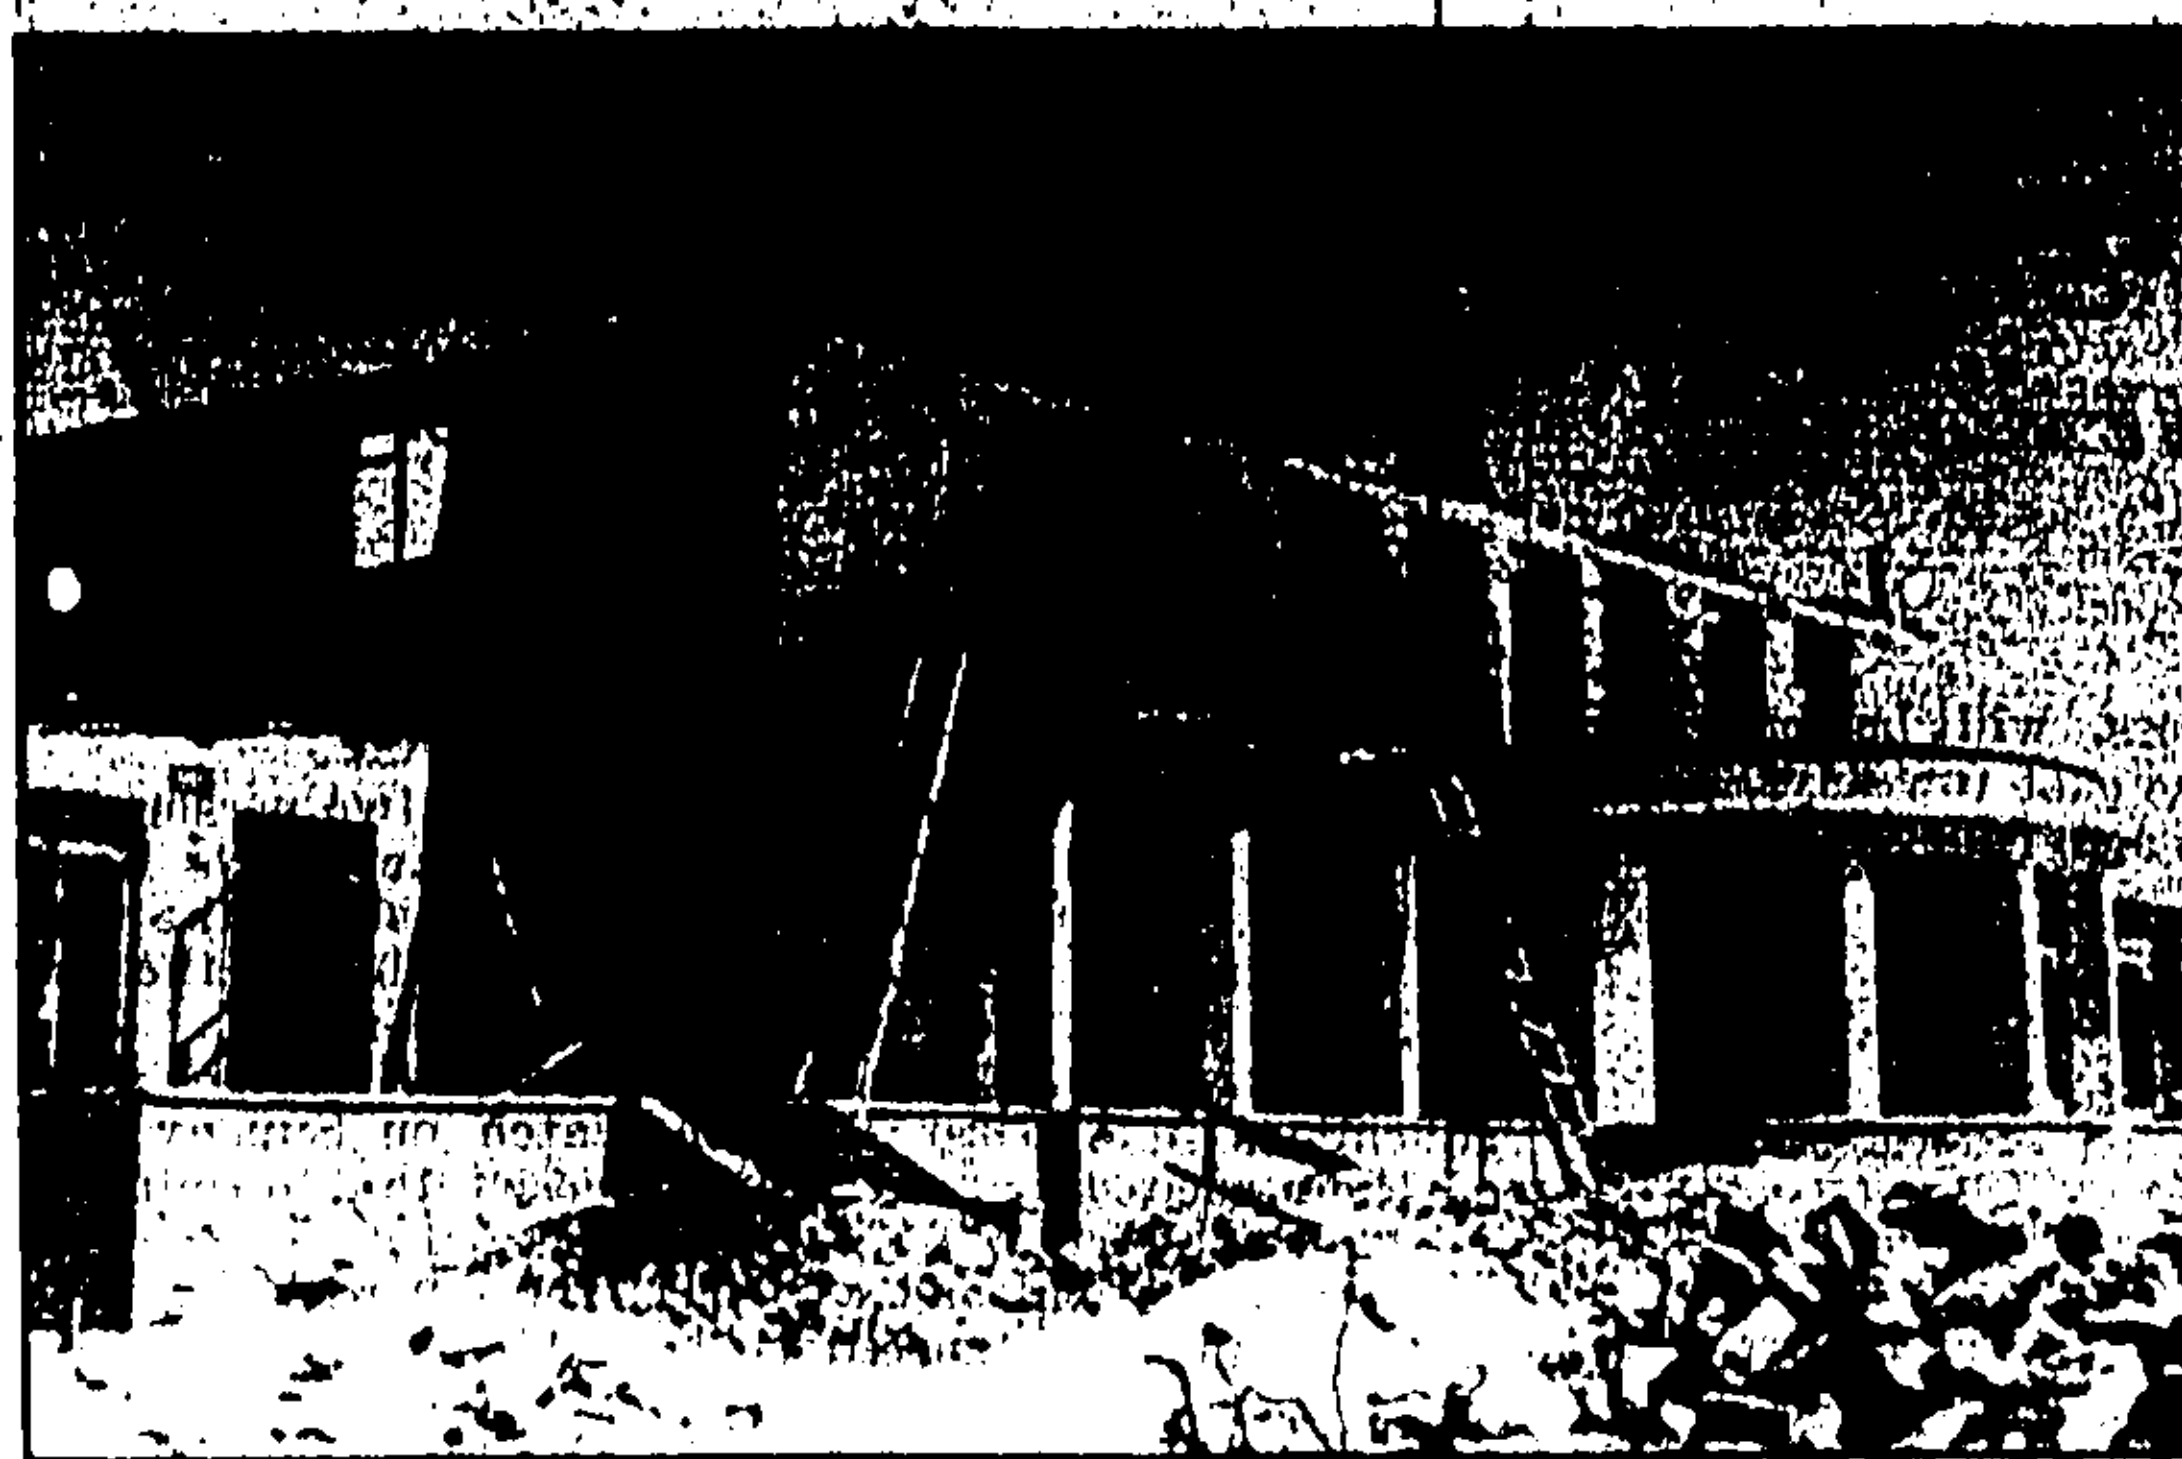

"The Russians have chosen the remote part of the continent for exploration," says Mr. Law. "It is an area far more difficult to reach than the Pole itself. Explorers have named it the 'Pole of Inaccessibility'."

The Soviet expedition has made considerable progress in the Antarctic since it last sailed from East Russia, last December.

Two 12,000-ton icebreakers, Ob and Lena, were specially built in Holland for the trip. With them went "refrigerator ship No. 7," which is supposed to have acted as mother ship to a Soviet submarine on an earlier trip in the Antarctic. Leading the expedition is 54-year-old Dr. Mikhail Somov, a tough, brilliant Arctic explorer, Doctor of Geography, former commander of a Soviet floating ice base, and a member of the Soviet Union. Dr. Douglas Mawson, who discovered Queen Maryland in 1911, Dr. Somov established his expedition ashore on the rocky coast early in January.

FREQUENT CONTACT

Sailors swarmed over the bleak landscape. Five houses containing two three-room flats were quickly built for the polar scientists and six big dormitories for the other members of the expedition. Foundations were drilled for a polar observatory, a 600-kilowatt power station, and a 2,500-ton fuel dumping. The ice had been holed over Mirny on January 13.

ROBES FOR NATIVE CHIEFS

Salisbury, Oct. 9.

A total of 300 uniforms for Northern Rhodesia chiefs are now being prepared by suppliers overseas, according to a statement from the Secretary for Native Affairs in Lusaka.

The uniforms are being paid for out of Native Authority funds and will be worn to council meetings. It had originally been suggested that the chiefs should wear traditional robes with long, black robes with coloured facings. Those worn by senior chiefs would have red facings on black. Other chiefs would wear blue facings on black.

Paramount chiefs have, of course, the privilege of choosing their own uniform style and it is understood that one tribal group favours wearing a plain black suit instead of a gown.—China Mail Special.

Bank Manager, 99 Retires

Copenhagen, Oct. 9.

Mr. N. C. Rasmussen, who is 99 years of age, has retired as manager of a bank in Oester Assels, Northern Jutland, to enter an old folks home together with his 94-year-old wife.

A few months ago Mr. and Mrs. Rasmussen celebrated their "steel" wedding anniversary—after 75 years of marriage.

Mr. Rasmussen became manager of the bank 27 years ago at the early age of 72. He is succeeded by Mr. Mikkel Mark, a mere 69, who has assisted Mr. Rasmussen for many years.—China Mail Special.

Doctor Declares War On Smoking 'CIGARETTE CANCER'

Oslo, Oct. 9.

Lung cancer is on the increase in Norway and in a recent issue of the Norwegian Medical Association's periodical two prominent cancer specialists accused their colleagues of having a "passive" attitude to the dangers of smoking.

They urged the need for a comprehensive nation-wide anti-cigarette campaign; they blamed the National Anti-Cancer Society for not including smoking in their widely publicised list of cancer danger-signals, and the Government for passively accepting the ever-increasing tobacco consumption.

And they drew special attention to the peril of increased smoking among schoolchildren.

The first specialist, Professor Dr. Røed Opsahl, who gave up smoking many years ago, asked the Norwegian medical profession to include smoking in their widely publicised list of cancer danger-signals, and the Government for passively accepting the ever-increasing tobacco consumption.

They urged the need for a comprehensive nation-wide anti-cigarette campaign; they blamed the National Anti-Cancer Society for not including smoking in their widely publicised list of cancer danger-signals, and the Government for passively accepting the ever-increasing tobacco consumption.

And they drew special attention to the peril of increased smoking among schoolchildren.

With lung cancer the chance of a possibly effective method of prevention, by cutting out cigarette inhalation, was at

Blind Ignorance

But why should the medical profession wait for absolute conclusive proof which could only be obtained by watching the horrible results of the experiment to which the public, largely in blind ignorance, was subjected as people continued to buy and inhale their cigarettes.

In this matter, he went on, the old rule of not spreading fear and anxiety did not apply. The price we had to pay now was the fear which had to be spread among chain-smokers. But this price was nothing compared with what was to be gained. The terrible price had to be paid sooner or later in any case, and the price was increasing rapidly every year.

"The truth must be told. And must be told in such a way that it is not only understood, but that it cannot be misunderstood," Professor Opsahl wrote.

The "truth" in this case was set in the same number of the periodical in statistics by Dr. Einar Pedersen, Head of the Cancer Registry at the Radium Hospital in Oslo.

Male Victims

The figures he published showed that the annual deaths from lung cancer in Norway had increased from an average of 28 in the 1930's to an average of 218 in the years 1952-54. By 1960 the figure is expected to rise to 350, he said (Norway's total population is only just over 3,000,000).

In Norway, as in most countries, men are the chief victims of lung cancer. While in other countries a higher percentage of all deaths are due to lung cancer, Norway's rate of increase in lung cancer mortality appears to have been the most rapid of any country during the past twenty years.

In 1952, 31.3 per cent of all cancer deaths were due to lung cancer among men, while for Norway the figure was 7.8 per cent. But in Norway the total number of lung cancer deaths has tripled during the past two decades, and the present trend shows that this development is still only at its beginning stage.

In Oslo in 1960, said Dr. Pedersen, lung cancer will probably have taken first place as the leading cause of cancer deaths among men, as is now the case in London, Copenhagen and other European capitals.

Danger Period

Dr. Pedersen also gave statistics showing that the danger period for lung cancer starts at the age of 40. The figures also show that in 1952, the peak period came in the age-group 55 to 59 years, while in 1964 the peak was stretched between 65 and 69 years.

Meanwhile the National Anti-Cancer Society has appointed a committee of medical men, teachers, and representatives of sports clubs and of the Ministry of Education, to report on the smoking habits of young people. It was the warning from a similar committee in Sweden which prompted the Norwegians to start investigating their own school playgrounds. In Sweden it was found that many 11-year-old schoolchildren were already slaves to the smoking habit.

The Norwegian Committee will not merely record statistics and figures about child smokers and at what age they start with their first cigarettes. It will also try to find out why they smoke, what drives them to start and what they continue to the point of chain smoking.

Campaign

The Committee, under the chairmanship of Dr. Frederic Møller, Director of Public Hygiene, expects to report in a year's time. Meanwhile Professor Røed Opsahl has challenged the medical profession, the Norwegian press and radio to take lead in a nation-wide campaign against smoking.—China Mail Special.
